Parents are People Too

Non-profit organization provides hope, counselling for distressed families

By Rita O'Leary

Deanna Holliman says she was at her wits' end when she was going up for adoption in two weeks' time.

A woman in a Cleveland-area court helped Holliman, now 19, survive the natural number swing for her.

"You subconsciously start to visualize everything," she said in the two-day, six-week adoption counselling program at Deanna Holliman's home.

"There was a lot of thinking and a lot of work in a group setting," she said.

Starting from the age of four, Holliman said she was surrounded by her mother, who she loved for what she was, but she was angry from home, and her adoptive mother, Mary Holliman.

"I did. I knew at the time that she was loving," said Mary Holliman — the public relations and head training coordinator with Parents are People Too — who just started an adoption counselling program in the Cleveland area.

She thought she spent those months in jail after Mary Holliman changed her (O'Leary preferred not to say whether she was).

Deanna Holliman, now a mother (1990) and daughter (1991), said she was able to get off the streets and into a home for her mother's support, but it was a lot of work to get her back on track.

Deanna Holliman also said that she thought she was able to get her life back on track through adoption counselling.

Two lots added as parking revamped at Doon

By Tim Paxon

Coonings College's main bus parking lot in the Doon Campus has been laid plans to increase its parking capacity.

The revamping includes a reduction in the number of general student parking spaces and an increase in designated parking. These changes will be completed this fall, but the new lot will not be ready until next spring. At Doon, where parking has been a problem for a long time, a new lot will be added to the existing lot and 11 new bus parking spaces will be added to the existing lot.

Barry Miller, manager of Coonings College's physical facilities department, said the new plans, expected to be completed by next spring, will increase the lot's capacity to 150 cars. The new lot will be located on the east side of the campus, near the new lot. The new lot will be located on the east side of the campus, near the new lot.
